

DZ

Daisy Zhou, also known as DZ is a Brooklyn-based director and cinematographer. Splitting her childhood years between Shanghai and rural Pennsylvania, DZ had an eclectic upbringing that still influences her work today. Her talent behind the camera was recognised during her university years, when her thesis short, 'How to Be A Black Panther', took home the audience award at the Brooklyn Film Festival and went on to screen at other festivals across the globe. Named one of Adweek's 'top 15 talented directors who are raising the standard for storytelling', DZ has helmed major campaigns in collaboration with top artists and brands such as Prada, Playstation, Nike and most recently Aston Martin for their first-ever SUV. Driven by curiosity, passion and determination, Daisy directed a commercial short set in the world of Vogue dancing. This caught the attention of Nike New York, who hired her to shoot and direct a new spot featuring transgender international vogue dancer Leiomy Maldonado. The spot premiered ahead of the 2018 NYC Pride,
